Key information about PPK

PPK participants

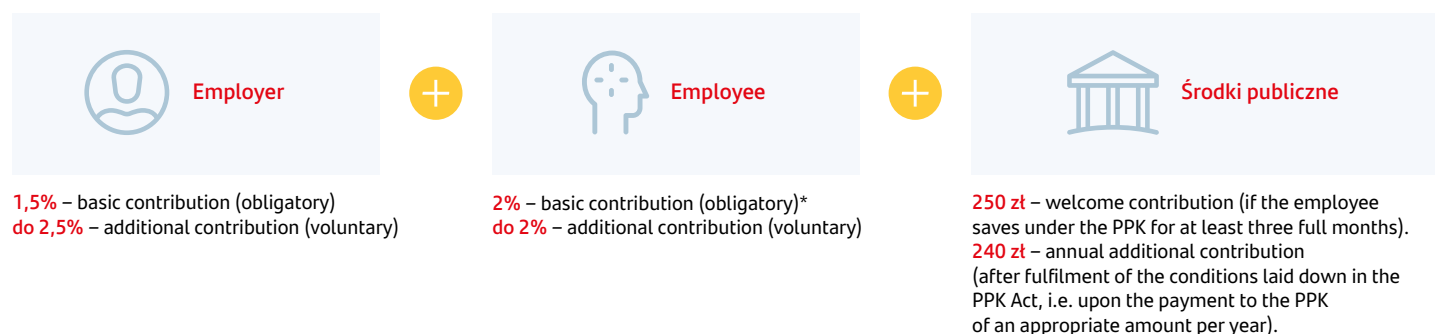

Employees who have attained the age of 18 years but have not attained the age of 55 years have to be enrolled in the PPK (if they didn't resign to participate in the PPK earlier). Employees who have attained the age of 55 years but have not attained the age of 70 years may declare their willingness to enrol in the PPK. After the age of 70 the enrolment in the PPK is not possible.

- Employee may opt out of paying contributions to the PPK at any time by submitting an appropriate statement to his employer. He must remember that if he opts out of paying contributions, his employer will also be exempted from this obligation. In this situation, the funds from the State Treasury will not be credited to employees' PPK accounts. As a result, no funds will be credited to his PPK account.
- Employee may recommence the payment of contributions to the PPK at any time. It is sufficient to submit an appropriate request to your employer.
- Employer has a duty to automatically re-enrol in the PPK, every 4 years, those employees who have opted out of paying contributions (this applies to employees who have attained the age of 18 but have not attained the age of 55 years). Each employee has the right to submit to their employer a statement to opt out again of paying contributions.

Participation in PPK is a triple benefit for employees

Payments to your PPK account will come from 3 sources: from employee, from employer and from the State Treasury (the Labour Fund):

*For persons whose remuneration obtained from various sources in a given month does not exceed in total the amount of 120% of the minimum remuneration, the basic contribution may be less than 2%, but not less than 0.5% of the remuneration.

Investment in PPK

The funds gathered in the PPK will be invested in investment funds – each participant will be automatically assigned to the sub-fund corresponding to their age which will reduce the investment risk as an employee gets closer to the age of 60.

Benefits from the maintenance of PPK for the employer and the employee

Employer

- PPK as an additional component of an attractive benefit package offered by the employer (e.g. making additional contributions for employees after a certain time of service on top of the basic (obligatory) contribution of 1.5%).
- Employer's costs associated with the financing of contributions to PPK can be treated as income deductible expenses.
- Contributions financed by the Employer are excluded from the base salary, which is used to calculate social security and disability insurance premiums.

Employee

- Additional savings after the age of 60 (an Employee joining the PPK at the age of 20 with a gross monthly salary of PLN 5,000 may save more than PLN 290,000*).
- Capital investment in accordance with a strategy aligned with the Employee's age which will be adjusted with time.
- The savings in PPK are treated as entirely private assets, unlike the pension premiums paid to ZUS and OFE.
- No tax imposed on money withdrawn by the Employee from PPK past the age of 60.
- Acquisition of PPK assets through succession is not subject to donation or inheritance tax.

*After 40 years of saving assuming an adequate rate of return (the fund, however, does not guarantee achievement of the investment goal) - calculations made using the PPK Calculator available at <https://www.santander.pl/ppk/kalkulator-ppk>. Calculation assumptions: age of an employee enrolled in the PPK – 20 years, PLN 5,000 gross remuneration, basic (mandatory) contribution of the employee to the PPK: 2% of gross remuneration, basic (mandatory) contribution of the employer to the PPK: 1.5% of gross remuneration, projected annual rate of return in the withdrawal period: 2.75%, projected annual increase in remuneration: 2.8%, projected annual average rate of return in the investment period: 3.5%, no additional contributions, saving up to the age of 60, management costs – 0,50% (include no more than 0.10% success fee).

19% capital gains tax (determined in accordance with Article 30a(1)(11b) of the PIT Act) we will not charge in the case of withdrawals after you turn 60, assuming the payment of: 25% of funds once and the remaining 75% in at least 120 monthly installments or 100% of funds in at least 120 monthly installments. Changing these assumptions (reducing the number of installments or a one-off payment of the entire amount) will result in the need to charge you capital gains tax. Pursuant to the PIT Act (Article 30a(13) of the PIT Act), the taxable income will be determined as the amount of the payment from the redemption of participation units, less the expenses for the purchase of these redeemed.

Sub-funds Santander PPK SFIO

What are target-date funds?

The purpose of using target-date sub-funds in the PPK program is to facilitate long-term investments aimed at accumulating and growing the capital after the age of 60. The characteristic feature of this kind of sub-funds is to precisely define the target date which, according to the sub-fund's underlying assumptions, is the date when the participant will stop making contributions to the fund and will start withdrawing the money. Depending on the target date, the investment policy will be automatically changing during the capital accumulation period in order to adapt the acceptable risk level to the PPK participant's age. It should be taken into consideration that investing activity involves risk. The sub-funds do not guarantee that the stated investment objective will be accomplished or that a specific return on investment will be achieved.

Each employee participating in the PPK scheme will be assigned to an appropriate sub-fund based on the age. The table below shows the target dates for of the sub-funds corresponding to PPK participant age groups.

2008 – 2012	2070	Santander PPK 2070

*Also including participants born before 1963.

 The sub-fund has not been launched - the Fund will announce the launch of the Santander PPK 2070 sub-fund on the website Santander.pl/TFI.

How will the money contributed to PPK sub-funds be invested?

The investment policy of the target-date sub-funds will be consistent with the key assumptions of the PPK Act in respect of the need to minimize the investment risk with time as the employee approaches the age of 60. Knowing precisely the investment horizon (the date when the Employee will turn 60), the manager will initially invest the majority of assets in equity instruments and then, as the Employee gets older, gradually shift a growing share of the funds to investments associated with a lower degree of risk, such as debt securities. At the same time, it should be remembered that the Santander PPK SFIO sub-funds are characterized by risk related mainly to market interest rates fluctuations, credit risk, liquidity risk and fluctuations in share prices. Before making any investment decisions, read the fund prospectus, which contains, inter alia, the full list of risks.

Allocation of target-date funds:

Investment policy of Santander PPK SFIO sub-funds

The funds in the PPK will be managed by the financial institution maintaining the PPK, selected by your employer in consultation with employees. Throughout the period of participation in the PPK, you will save in one subfund matching the risk level to your age, i.e. in the so-called defined date fund.

Each PPK participant is automatically assigned to a specific sub-fund of a defined date appropriate to their age. The investment policy of such sub-funds - in accordance with the assumptions of the PPK Act - limits the investment risk as you approach 60 years of age. Knowing exactly the investment perspective (date of attainment of the age of 60 years), it will be possible to initially invest more of the funds (assets) into shares and then (as you get closer to the age of 60) to gradually invest more and more funds in debt instruments characterised by lower investment risk. The principles of investment policy for each defined date subfund that take into account the different ages of the participants in the PPK, are described in the PPK Act.

As part of the debt component the sub-fund can invest:

- at least 70% of the value of its assets in government and quasi government bonds or bank deposits,
- not more than 30% of the value of its assets in other financial instruments, however, not more than 10% in financial instruments without an investment grade rating.

As part of the equity component the sub-fund can invest:

- at least 40% of the value of its assets in the shares of WIG20 companies,
- not more than 20% of the value of its assets in the shares of WIG40 companies,
- not more than 10% of the value of its assets in the shares of other WSE listed companies,
- at least 20% of the value of its assets in foreign shares of companies from OECD countries.

Debt securities – what is a bond?

- Government and quasi-government bonds are securities issued, underwritten or guaranteed by the State Treasury, the National Bank of Poland, a local administration unit or by a central government or central bank of a Member State, the European Central Bank, the European Union, the European Investment Bank or international organizations, provided that the securities issued, underwritten or guaranteed by such international organizations have an investment-grade rating assigned by a rating agency recognized by the European Central Bank in its regular operations.

Equity securities – what is a share?

- A financial instrument (security) representing a partial share of its owner in the capital of a joint-stock company.
- The share is a legal title to joint ownership of a company organised in the form of a joint-stock company.
- Examples of equity indices where equity securities are listed:

Poland	WIG, WIG20, mWIG40, sWIG80
Germany	DAX
USA	S&P 500, Nasdaq, Dow Jones
Japan	Nikkei 225
United Kingdom	FTSE100

- The main investment categories include shares and similar equity instruments, debt securities and money market instruments.
The sub-funds invest in debt securities and money market instruments issued by national and local governments and business entities.
- The share of sub-funds' investments in participation units or shares of other open-end investment funds may not be higher than 30% of the sub-fund's asset value.
- The sub-funds do not use benchmarks to assess the investment performance.

Risk and reward profile of Santander PPK SFIO sub-funds

The main investment risk categories associated with the sub-funds' investment policy are the risks arising from equity investments (mainly in shares) and the risks arising from investments in debt securities (mainly bonds). Investing activity involves risk. The sub-funds do not guarantee that the stated investment objective will be achieved or that a specific return on investment will be achieved. The participant must take into account the possibility of losing at least part of the invested funds. When investing in mutual funds, the participant acquires participation units of such funds, and not the underlying assets that the fund itself invests in. A full description of the sub-fund's risks can be found in the prospectus and, in abbreviated form, in the KID.

Investment philosophy

The main investment selection criterion for the funds and portfolios under our management is the fundamental analysis which involves an in-depth examination of all aspects of the business operations conducted by issuers of the equities or bonds in which we want to invest. We pay special attention to the competences and motivation of the companies' management which we believe is a key to success. We closely monitor our investments and every year hold a few hundred meetings with companies in Poland and abroad.

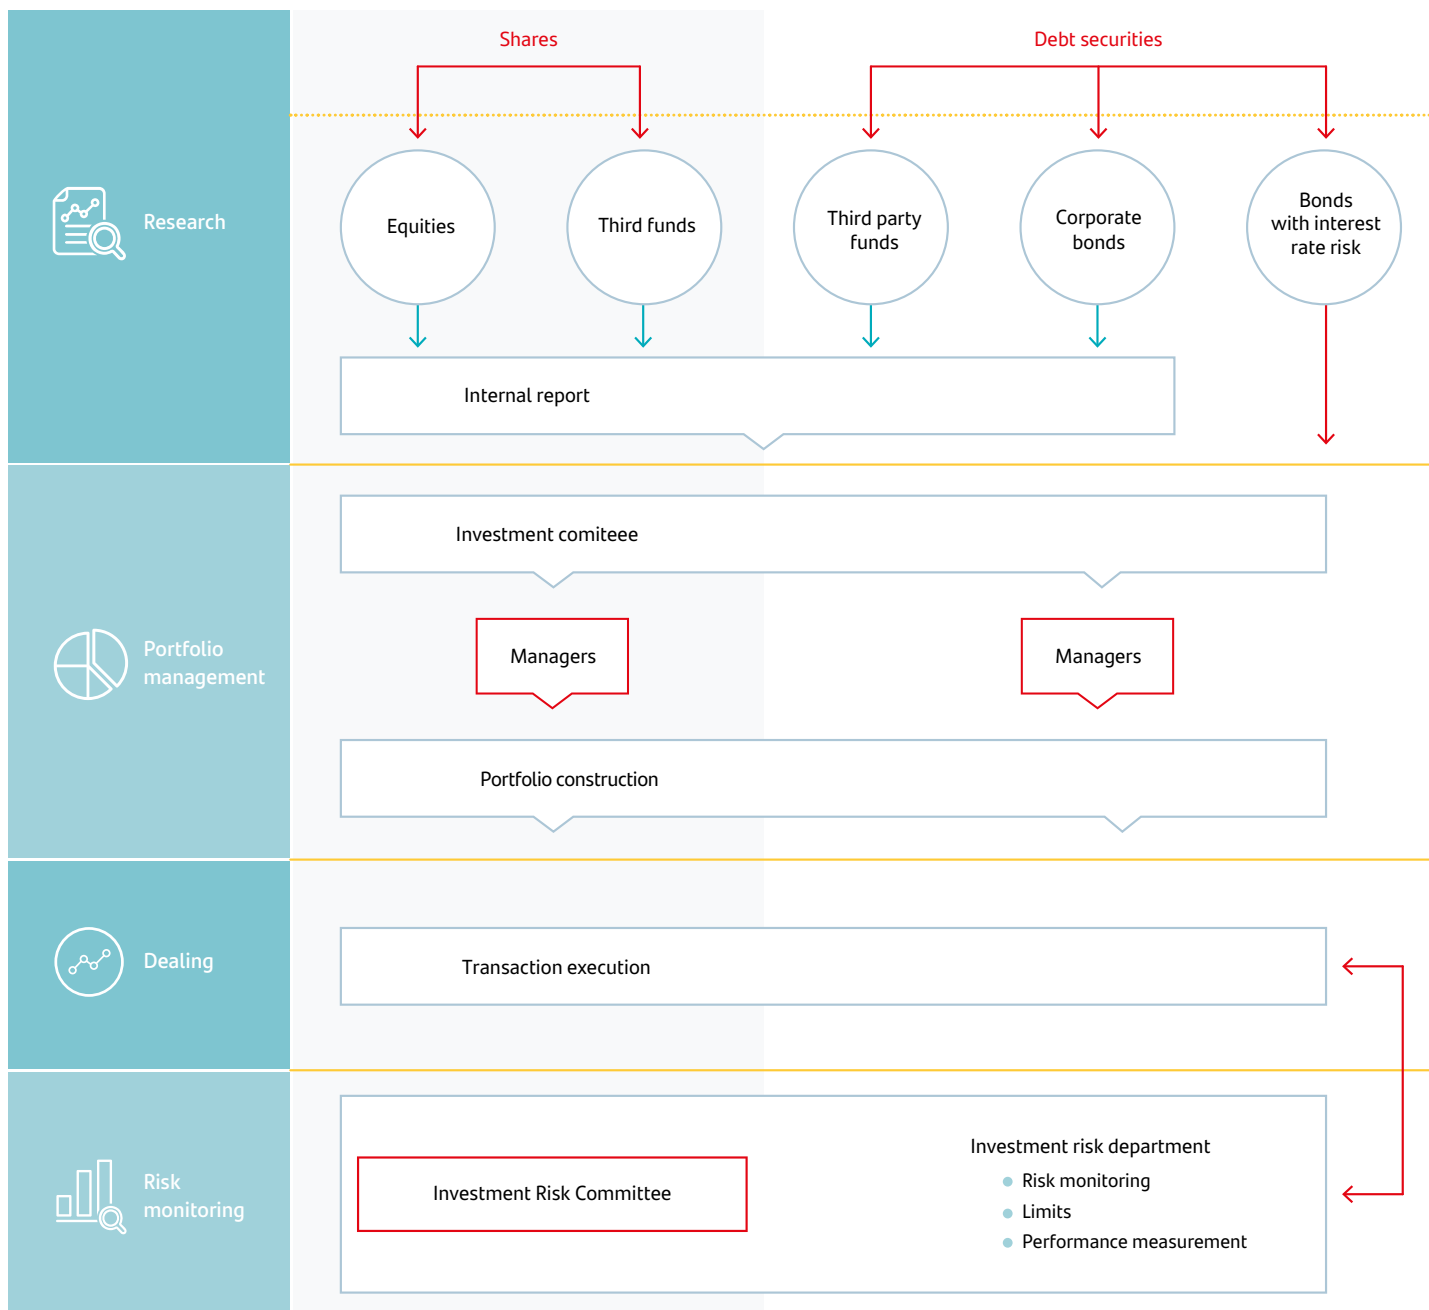

When investing in government bonds, we look mainly at the macroeconomic analysis of the factors that have impact on changes in the inflation rate since the performance of investments in bonds depends to a large extent on interest rates, which are determined on the basis of the current and forecasted inflation. As we invest in securities denominated both in the Polish Złoty and in other currencies (for instance, the Polish eurobonds), our research of inflation changes and future prospects for the interest rates is carried out separately for each currency.

In the case of corporate bonds, the selection of instruments for the portfolios is based on a process in which we analyse both the structure of the bond issue (process called admission to the investment process) and the issuer's financial standing. The evaluation of the issue structure includes, among other things, a review of the issue documents, its size, predicted liquidity and the possibility of valuation based on the quotations from an active market. This part of the investment process is handled by the Investment Risk Department. A precondition for investing in securities of a given entity is a positive result of the credit risk assessment. In the course of the process, we take into account such aspects as the current situation in the issuer's industry, company-specific risks, the structure of the issuer's balance sheet, and the company's and its management's record of investment achievements to date, if the purpose of the securities issue is to finance an investment project.

Investment process

An important element of asset management is the investment process which should ensure optimum selection and utilization of the potential of the team and the IT systems, and proper execution of the process.
